

WRITTEN BY: DEVANGANA SHARMA
ILLUSTRATED BY: ARIELA WHITE

In the cold of December, stood a tiny, tiny tree at the edge of Peggy's Cove.

So small the seagulls couldn't see it.

So light that the wind almost swept it away.

So small that no one thought it could be a Christmas tree.

Such a small tree in a big world.

Alone.

Quite.

Waiting.

